Rejects Segregation Law in Virginia

ASSOCIATED PRESS
A placement plan was rejected by a federal judge as "nothing short of racial discrimination" and there were indications that an Atlanta plan is through time.

In the troubled South, state members of the school board at Little Rock, Ark., voted to end segregation, and a white man was elected to the Dollarway Board in an election split along racial lines.

Walter E. Hoffman told board at Newport News, Va., to accept a new pupil placement by March 15. He said the school board and the Placement Board they would deny qualified admission to white students.

He threw out a one-paragraph that simply said pupils would be left to the state plan, ordered by Frank Hooper, will be Hooper's court Dec. 14. After an Alabama law was upheld on its face, U.S. Supreme Court, it was decided on Page Three.

Bond Issues Are Approved Generally

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The electorate generally gave votes of confidence to their school boards yesterday as Arkansas school districts put mileage proposals, bond issue proposals and directorships to the ballot test.

Newport, Malvern, Pine Bluff and Batesville approved main bond issues. Proposals to reduce tax millages were approved in all districts where reductions were offered except Little Rock and Helena-West Helena.

In reported elections in which a school board member was seeking re-election, the Nixon will be able to continue to his seat.

Batesville gave 1,000-225 approval to a $25,000 bond issue to build two new elementary schools and an addition to the high school.

Malvern voted 722-729 to issue $740,000 worth of bonds to construct a new junior high school for whites and a Negro elementary school.

With most of the votes counted, Newport had given 804-109 approval to a $500,000 bond issue. The money will be used to build a 24-room elementary school and a 12-room Negro high school.

Pine Bluff approved a $300,000 issue for new construction.

Helena-West Helena voters averted a financial crisis by rejecting a proposed cut from 50 to 35 mills. The school board offered the cut after an appraisal firm released Phillips County's property tax assessments totals. Later, it was found the total erroneously had been set three million dollars too high. Under the lower assessment total the bond would have faced a financial bind with a 35-mill tax rate.

The board recommended that its own proposal be defeated and promised to cut the tax to 41 mills next year.

The Marvel school district, faced with the same problem, saw voters approve a proposal slash from 45 to 35 mills. The school board previously had said adoption of the low figure might mean a short school term next year.

Little Rock voters went along with school board recommendations and rejected a proposed cut from 40 to 35 mills. The board put the proposal on the ballot under pressure but said it could not afford a tax cut at this time.

Voters in the Pulaski and the Custer-Morning Star District near Hot Springs accepted school board recommendations to increase their millages from 40 to 45.

The Pulaski board said population overflow of Little Rock made more revenues necessary. Custer-Morning Star is financing a $76,000 bond issue for a new high school.

But millage increases were the order of the day as the various school districts adjusted to higher property assessments made the state's tax equalization program. Jonesboro approved a whopping decrease, from 32 to 30 mills. This was the state's largest decrease. Most decreases were in the two 40-mill range.

Guernsey Class to Stage Play December 4

Guernsey Junior Class will present its annual class play Friday, Dec. 4, at 7 p.m. in the school House. It is directed by Harry F. Kindred and the cast includes Wanda B. R. Paine Cox, Bill Atkins, Bill Byrnes, Barbara Atkins, Howard Walker, James A. J. S. Walker, David Clayton and Dorothy D.

The session is an outgrowth of the recent congressional investigation of radio-TV quiz shows. Kindred said the smoke produced by a new diesel fire has sent up a pall of suspicion over an industry whose genuine usefulness to the nation's economy can still stand it.

The task he said is to develop a plan of action whose feasibility is apparent to the public and to Congress.

Ushers will be Jean Jones and Ruth Powell. Admission is 25 cents and tickets will run from 25 cents and 50 cents.

Infant of James H. Lumpkin Dies

James Herbert Lumpkin, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Lumpkin, died Monday night in a Texarkana hospital. Survivors include a sister, Katie Ann Lumpkin of Hope. Services were held at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Holy Grove with Oakhurst Funeral Service in charge.

This soft-sell approach could be upset, of course, if Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York should come out in the open as a candidate for the GOP nomination earlier than expected.

Says Broadcasters Must Help U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Earl W. Kintner of the Federal Trade Commission today told broadcasters they must cooperate with the government in trying to dispel a pall of suspicion which he said threatens to damage the industry.

Kintner made this statement in opening an industry-government conference designed to develop a coordinated attack on deceptive advertising via television and radio.

The session is an outgrowth of the recent congressional investigation of radio-TV quiz shows.

Police Seek Two Diamond Robbers

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Police today sought two business-like young bandits who Tuesday made off with diamonds valued at between $80,000 and $90,000.

The pair, one of them disguised as a policeman, invaded the 12th-floor office of wholesale jewel merchant Manes Topper, bound and gagged. Topper and his wife, Sadie, with adhesive tape, scooped the gems—including one of 7 carats—into a briefcase and sprinted downstairs.

The uniformed man knocked on the locked door of the office and told Topper, 53, "I'm a policeman. We have a report on your stolen car."

Topper's car had been stolen two weeks ago so he admitted the man, who was followed by another wearing a gray hat and topcoat. The second man announced, "This is a holdup."

Police Sgt. James McGauley said the job was thoroughly worked out. The men were familiar with the office and building.

Americans May Be Sentenced in Cuba Today

By GEORGE KAUFMAN

HAVANA, (AP) — Two Americans charged with trying to overthrow Fidel Castro's revolutionary regime may learn a military court's verdict on them today, but another will have to wait until Friday. The government has demanded death for two of the Awaiting verdicts today at Pinar del Rio were Frank Austin Young, 78, a commercial pilot of Miami, Fla.; Peter John Lambton, 24, a British-born naturalized American of Nassau, Bahamas, and 35 Cubans.

The military prosecutor asked the death sentence for Young and Fernando Pinto Bortol, 24, Cuban who once studied at Columbia University in New York, and 30-year sentences for Lambton and 11 of the Cuban defendants.

The 37 tried Monday at Pinar del Rio were captured during a clash with Cuban troops during which one soldier was killed.

Young's attorney, Jorge Bacardi, warned the military tribunal that execution of the American would touch off a strong anti-Cuban campaign in the United States. The only other American to face trial was for Young and Pinto Bortol.

The military prosecutor asked the death sentence for both Cuban Del Pino and Luciano Linares Gastel, a former policeman under president Fulgencio Batista.

Del Pino, wounded by police last July when he landed his light plane near Havana, cried as he was carried into the courtroom on a stretcher.

"These tears are the tears of a man, not a coward," he told the tribunal. "I am not afraid to die because they refused to let me see my mother."

The government charged that Del Pino, a former Castro supporter, flew to Cuba to pick up Gastel and other Batista men wanted as war criminals.

Del Pino contended that he was teaching an old friend, Fernando Cobas, to fly and that Cobas, working with the police, switched off the engine and forced him to land where the police were waiting for him. He charged he was really being tried for anti-Castro statements he had made in Havana.

In line with this idea, the vice president is expected to delay setting up any formal campaign organization or appointing a campaign manager. He may decide to do his own thing.

This doesn't mean Nixon is overlooking any bets or that he is taking it for granted he will get the nomination.

He has Leonard W. Hall, former GPO national chairman, working diligently to line up delegate strength. He is going along with the formation of Nixon clubs. He will make speaking appearances at frequent intervals.

This soft-sell approach could be upset, of course, if Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York should come out in the open as a candidate for the GOP nomination earlier than expected.

Asked if he is considering running for president, Nixon said he is not.

Grinning crookedly, the dark man acknowledged the room and the job with a nod. "Where do we start?"

THE STORY: Davey Cleaves' father has bought a new house in the country. Davey feels sad and uprooted as his folks prepare to leave. The movers have just arrived.

CHAPTER II

At first, Davey disliked the movers. The first, the one who was very slender. His hair and complexion were fair, but his skin taut. His jaw was wide and blue-faded blue eyes, set in deeply shadowed, and his eyes were like two small jets that glittered brightly from the dark obscurity beneath his heavy black brows.

In his manner and the loose powerful way he moved, there was something insolent and boastful.

The dark man nodded after the retreating figure of Davey's mother. Raising a large, heavily muscled hand, he made a slight meaningful gesture.

In the shadows, Davey started forward and he did not know its meaning, but he sensed strongly that it was evil and certainly uncomplimentary to his mother.

Then the dark man looked suddenly around in his direction. The deep-set, glittering eyes showed no surprise at seeing him there. Indeed, they seemed to measure his small, uncertain figure with wry amusement.

"Hi, tiger," The man grinned.

For a long moment Davey could only stare back. Finally, however, he hazarded a step forward, just out into the light. When he spoke his voice was barely audible.

"Hi," he said.

Then, looking quickly down to tear himself free of the dark man's paralyzing gaze, he ran.

sidewalk sockets were nervous and evasive.

Both men wore heavy black cord trousers that were grayed with grime, and their brown leather windbreakers were unmarked by any company insignia. The stood.

The blond man wore a knitted cap of dark blue, the dark one was bare-headed.

Grinning crookedly, the dark man acknowledged the room and the job ahead with a brief nod. "Where do we start?"

Davey's mother made a small gesture of uncertainty. "I suppose you know best — but would it be all right to start right here and sort of work our way back? Everything goes except the things in the bedroom closets. We're just finishing in the kitchen."

"You name it, lady." The dark man looked around with unmarked indifference at his companion. "All set, Eddie?"

The blond man, Eddie, looked up, as if startled, and nodded. "Sure."

Davey's mother smiled a little stiffly. "I'd better get back then. You just go ahead." Thriving, she moved off toward the kitchen.

The dark man nodded after the retreating figure of Davey's mother. Raising a large, heavily muscled hand, he made a slight meaningful gesture.

In the shadows, Davey started forward and he did not know its meaning, but he sensed strongly that it was evil and certainly uncomplimentary to his mother.

Then the dark man looked suddenly around in his direction. The deep-set, glittering eyes showed no surprise at seeing him there. Indeed, they seemed to measure his small, uncertain figure with wry amusement.

"Hi, tiger," The man grinned.

For a long moment Davey could only stare back. Finally, however, he hazarded a step forward, just out into the light. When he spoke his voice was barely audible.

"Hi," he said.

Then, looking quickly down to tear himself free of the dark man's paralyzing gaze, he ran.

Davey descended into the dim, mysterious precincts of the basement. Arriving finally at the bottom, he looked up at the many-armed monster of the furnace and then, hearing his father's voice, extended his gaze to the open doorway of the storage room. Moving slowly, as if in the grip of an enormous weariness, he went over and looked inside.

Mr. McCracken smiled at Davey, and the bare light from above picked up the deer-pleasant creases of his face. "Well, there, young feller," he said brightly. "How about it? All set to take off and be a country squire?"

Because he liked Mr. McCracken and wanted to be agreeable to him, Davey nodded. Mr. McCracken was nice. Sometimes he said things you couldn't exactly understand, but you could always tell they were meant to be friendly. Davey's father, turning finally from the trunks, dropped a pair of ancient ledgers onto the discarded pile. "Hi," he said. But before Davey could answer he turned to Mr. McCracken, nodding down at the pile. "What you don't want, I guess you'll just have to burn. I don't know where do you get so much junk anyway?" His gaze lit to Davey, but absently as if he weren't really looking at him. His solid, blunt features, under the harsh, bold lighting, might have been craven thoughtfully in a stone. "Your mother send you down?"

Davey nodded. "The movers are here. I saw them — two of them."

"Good," Davey's father turned to Mr. McCracken. "I hope they know their business. I called an independent firm. They're cheaper than the regulars — but I guess they're all right."

"Sure," — Mr. McCracken nodded — "sure, they are. Probably no difference but the price."

Davey's father looked back toward the trunks. "That the crop?"

"Yeah," Mr. McCracken said "except for that case in the back."

Davey shifted his feet, scuffing his right shoe against his left, and looked down absently at the discarded pile. Something glittered invitingly from its depths, beckoning him forward.

"Oh, yes!" his father said suddenly. "Mike Stewart's tools. Come on, let's drag them out."

Davey reached the edge of the pile, knelt down before it. Stretching his hand out to the brightness, he took hold of it, something cold and metallic, and pulled it toward him.

Davey's father looked down. "Hey, Davey," he said. "Knock it off, hush? Mr. McCracken doesn't want that stuff smeared all over the place."

Davey looked up, his gaze clouded, defensive. "I found something..."

His father's gaze seemed to focus on him clearly for the first time. He placed one hand on his hip in a gesture of mild threat. "Young man," he said firmly. "You'd better watch your tone. Now, get up out of that junk and leave it alone. It's old and dirty and I've already told you we aren't keeping any of it."

Under his father's steady gaze, Davey relinquished his hold on the object.

"I'm sorry," he said grudgingly. "It's all right." His father smiled. "But I think you'd better go on back to your mother. It's easier for her to keep an eye on you up there."

Davey watched in bleak desolation as his father led by Mr. McCracken disappeared into the deep shadows behind the massive trunks and cardboard cartons that reached almost to the ceilings at the far end of the room.

Sounds from the upper hallway told him that the movers, the blond man and the dark one were carrying something across the marble floor of the foyer toward the big front door that led out to the steps and the street.

There was a grunting sound, and then the dark man's voice echoes down angrily to where Davey had once understood his mother to say were made of carved cherries.

As the two approached, Davey scrambled to his feet. The blond man emerged, cast a quick uncertain glance in Davey's direction, then passed quickly, almost natively down the steps and onto the ramp leading up into the van.

The dark man, however, catching sight of him, stopped. Holding his head rigid under the weight of the table, he turned his gaze down in Davey's direction. "Hi, tiger," he said.

Washington (AP) The Air Force today all but canceled the B70 heavy bomber program.

It cut the program, on which about half a billion dollars has been spent to date, back to a small-scale development project to produce a "prototype." It was indicated the reduced program would result in a couple of planes, the first to make its test flight in April 1963.

The B70, designed to fly at three times the speed of sound, was originally planned as replacement for the B52 heavy intercontinental nuclear bomber.

Koehl American Aviation Co. holds the major contract. General Electric was responsible for the 200 advanced jet engines designed to power the bomber.

Other major aircraft companies and electronic firms were heavily involved in the B70. Lockheed had

Air Force Cancels Out B70 Bombers

WASHINGTON (AP) The Air Force today all but canceled the B70 heavy bomber program.

The Air Force said the decision terminated some contracts connected with the B70. Among the canceled sub-contracts were those with International Business Machines for the bomb-navigation system, with Westinghouse Electric for defensive subsystems, and with Motorola for traffic control.

Officials estimated that reduction of the B70 program to a strictly development project would save the Air Force about $5 million dollars in the fiscal 1961 budget that will be submitted to Congress next month.

Hands Off, Auntie! Let Boys Help Self

Dear Dorothy Dix: My nephew, 19, has refused to enroll in college much to the disappointment of the whole family. He was graduated from high school in June. The shocking part is he was rated among the top ten outstanding students in Oakland. To initiate that record he had to study very hard and was up all times until 1 or 2 a.m. Just before finals he wanted to give up, he was so tired of studying but his pride was at stake. His school counselors said it is mental fatigue. If he had a wonderful vacation all summer he should be fully rested.

I believe his parents made a big mistake by giving him his college money which they had saved and let him buy a car. He claims he needed a car to get a job. He has made applications but has no job. Now he stays up all hours reading and sleeps most of the day. His parents do not want to be hard on him. They hope he will go to college next term.

Do you think it advisable to offer to contribute towards his tuition if his parents do not have the money? I am a working gal and do not have money to throw away but know the need of a college education today. What do you advise? — Auntie

Dear Auntie: Your nephew's problem is his and his parents' not yours. If he is bright enough to rank among the top ten of high school, he is bright enough to think his way through this present impasse. As his school counselors say, it is probably the result of mental fatigue. Now more than ever, your nephew must be encouraged to stand on his own two feet. His will needs to be strengthened, not weakened. He should be given small daily chores to do, even if it's only washing windows, polishing floors or cutting grass. It is important that he work for what he gets. If he needs a car he should have earned the money to pay for it. And that goes for his education too. Many of the most successful men I know have worked their way through college.

If you contribute toward his tuition, you will only be contributing to further disintegration of his will — the will to do for himself. To indulge him now could make the fatal difference between success or failure in his life. Over-kindness can be cruelly! I know for I've had a similar situation in my own family.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Three years before I met my husband, his sister had the family's first grandchild. Foolishly he was made to propose the wee girl a sterling silver baby service. We have been married 12 years and have several children of our own. My silver plate has been got horribly on the coupon plan and I'm still getting it. Now his sister is demanding that he fill this long-ago promise for the girl's he-cousin. We cannot afford this outrageous demand and my husband is quite disturbed with my feelings. Just how can this be resolved without too great a family rift? — Questioned, D. Jim.

Dear Questioning? Your husband made the promise and he must keep it, no matter what the hardship. The issue is moral, not material. It is a silver table service of more value than his word? Back him up even at great personal sacrifice. If he's the right sort of man, and I'm sure he is, he'll honor you forever. What you do now could make or mar all future relationship with his family. Don't give that ever-present Greek chorus of in-laws an excuse to tune up. Let the fault be on their side. Peveil your sister-in-law for the Mrs. Shylock she is by being Mrs. Bigheart, and you'll wind up the winner.

If she has a spark of fair play in her she might even suggest lightening the initial expense by giving one piece at a time.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I hope and pray you will have compassion on us and try to help in some way through your column. Our 13-year-old daughter left home — didn't let us know anything. We have already contacted the Buffalo police as we have reason to believe she went there. Her mother is sick with worry almost to the breaking point. If we only knew here she is. Will you please insert the following plea in your newspaper: P.M. who left her home in Oneida September 6, please get in touch with the family. Mother desperately sick with worry.

Signed, D. Jim.

Send your problem to DOROTHY DIX. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and address her care of this newspaper.

Terry, when the fire was discovered. He roused Bonnie and thought she was following him out of the house.

It was not until after he had assisted his wife and a daughter, Catherine, 17, in removing Mrs. Harris from the house that he discovered Bonnie was missing.

The intense flames kept him from going back into her room. Her body was found later in the ruins.

A son, Jimmy, 15, was spending the night with a friend and two older children live elsewhere. House and contents were a complete loss.

McGhee said he thought the fire might have started from a defective fuse.

Man Electrocuted Fighting House Fire

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A man was electrocuted near here today when a stream of water he was directing against a burning house struck a high-voltage electric power line.

E. Frank Squires, 49, of Mabelvale, southwest of Little Rock, was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital.

Erwin Sweeney, an invalid, was burned slightly before he could be removed from the burning house. He was treated at a hospital and dismissed.

The house was that of Ralph Davis at Mabelvale. Mrs. Davis' brother, Frank Sweeney, and the Davis' small child were in the dwelling when the fire was discovered.

Squires, a neighbor, was assisting volunteer firemen.

The stream from his hose struck the power line and the current evidently traveled down the water.

The Davis house was destroyed and a nearby house was damaged slightly.

Origin of the fire was not determined.

St. LOUIS (AP)—Eleven-year-old Bonnie McGhee burned to death in a house fire near Humphrey, southwest of Stuttgart, early today.

Other members of the family escaped, including an 83-year-old semi-invalid grandmother, Mrs. Callie Patton Harris.

Homer McGhee, Bonnie's father, said he grabbed 3-year-old son, ed the students to apply for admission under pupil placement laws.

This they did, but the board rejected their application. The Negroes now have asked federal district court to review the case. The Dollarway board countered by asking federal court to make the Negroes seek a legal remedy first in state courts.

The Dollarway district covers a suburban and rural area northwest of Pine Bluff.

Young Porkers Give Phillips Oilers a Scare

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP)—Arkansas' young, determined Razorbacks played the veteran Bartlesville Oilers to what seemed like defeat last night before Oiler Gary Thompson scored six points in the last minute to give Bartlesville a 79-76 basketball victory.

It was the first game of the year for the Razorbacks, who are considered a question-mark team in the Southwest Conference. The always-tough Oilers of the National Industrial Basketball League beat the Russian All-Stars soundly in Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day.

Bartlesville grabbed a 44-34 half-time lead in its bout with the Razorbacks. But midway through the second half, Arkansas forged in front, 52-51. The Hogs widened the margin and held a three-point bulge with a minute to play. Then Thompson went into action.

Thompson was high scorer for the night with 21. Phil Murrell hit 19 for Bartlesville. Pat Foster scored 19 for Arkansas. C. Y. de Rhoden hit 18 and Ronnie Garner scored 15.

Arkansas hit 26 of 61 field goals, 42.5 per cent, while Bartlesville hit 30 of 81 for 37 per cent.

Robertson Is in Form for Cincinnati

By HUGH FULLERTON JR
Associated Press Sports Writer

Oscar Robertson and Jerry West All-American basketball players last season who have been heralded as surefire repeaters, started the 1953-54 season as if they intended to clinch their places in the opening games.

As usual, Cincinnati's Robertson had the statistical edge over his West Virginia rival, although neither had to work very hard as their teams won easily.

BIG Oscar contributed 45 points to Cincinnati's 107-62 victory over outnumbered Indiana State. West playing only about three quarters in West Virginia's 83-76 victory over Tennessee, accounted for 21 points and 22 rebounds and played ably on defense.

Kansas State and Kentucky, rated first and second in the nation in the Associated Press poll last season, started the new campaign with impressive victories along with such favorites as North Carolina State, St. John's (N.Y.), Ohio State, Purdue, Northwestern, Louisville and Louisiana State.

It was the first night of the new season for teams that come under NCAA regulations and there was plenty of action on all fronts.

Kansas State Coach Tex Winter used 17 players in an 83-82 victory over South Dakota State. Kentucky's Adolph Rupp called on 15, including Adolph Rupp Jr., to beat Colorado State College 106-73.

N.C. State overcame Penn State's stubborn zone defense to win 65-58. Ohio State sparked by sophomore whiz Jerry Lucas, whipped Wake Forest 77-69. St. John's, last season's National Invitation Tournament winner, trounced Bridgeport 90-66.

Larry Ramey of Butler poured in 27 in an 88-82 triumph over Wisconsin that spoiled the debut of Badger Coach John Erickson. In the Midwest, Iowa of the Big Ten edged Evansville, 1953 NCAA college division champion, 66-64.

Northwestern routed sophomore loaded Western Michigan 80-66;

Purdue defeated Valparaiso 70-57;

Iowa State beat South Dakota 66-

47; Missouri turned back Washington (St. Louis) 70-62 and St. Louis took an 89-64 intersectional decision over Alabam Christian.

Texas Christian, Southwest Conference champion, opened with a 65-47 decision over Austin College; Texas A&M beat Centenary 95-88; Texas trimmed McMurry 95-54; Texas Tech down New Mexico 84-62 and Oklahoma State of the Big Eight edged Texas Western 43-44.

Joe Brown Puts Lightweight Title on Line

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Joe

Brown, busier champion of them all, puts his world's lightweight title on the line for the eighth time tonight with Dave Charnley, the British Empire's pride, pretty sure it'll take it.

The aging Brown, who has gathered about $200,000 in three years of defending the double, hopes to ward off challengers. Leonard did it eight times and retired undefeated in 1925.

Charnley would like to become the first Britisher to hold the title since Freddie Welsh of 42 years ago, and also the first southpaw to be lightweight champion.

That southpaw business is a little painful to Brown. He almost lost his title to a lefthander—Kenney Lane—in this same Sam Houston Coliseum ring last year.

Charnley, who is built like a heavyweight from the waist up, is as big as Jack Dempsey's, comes with the tag "the midge Mariano."

Brown, the Little Baton Rouge La. Negro, has had almost three times as many fights as the 24-year-old Charnley—who is 19 years Brown's junior. But Charnley has one distinction Joe can't claim—he never has been knocked off his feet in 40 battles.

Brown is favored 12-5 here and 13-5 in New York to retain his championship and become the oldest man to ever hold it. He is just three months younger than Joe Gans was in 1908 when the latter lost the title to Battling Nelson.

U.S. Calls in Both Sides in Steel Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government summoned steel negotiators back into bargaining sessions today in an effort to avoid a new steel strike in late Jan.

There seemed little evidence of optimism, however, for an early settlement of the protracted dispute.

Director Joseph F. Finegan of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service arranged afternoon sessions with industry and union representatives.

The 30-day Taft-Hartley injunction, which stopped the strike last Nov. 7, will run out on Jan. 26. The 500,000 steelworkers then will be free to strike again if there is no settlement.

President Eisenhower is expected to lend a hand to the government mediator in his talk to the state Publicity and Parks Commission Thursday night.

Eisenhower reportedly will appear again to both sides to agree on a peace pact that will avoid a new strike threat. The White House said he will appeal for more labor-management understanding and co-operation generally to make sure this nation maintains economic superiority over the Soviet Union.

The steel industry made a set demand offer 10 days ago but the proposal was turned down by the union. The industry estimated the plan as worth 30 cents an hour in wage-benefit gains over a three-year contract period. The union said it was worth only 24 cents. Workers presently are averaging about $8.11 per hour, including overtime and other premiums.

A dispute over company demands for more leeway in changing work rules to achieve operating economies also complicates the situation. The union has rejected any such changes.

Director Ted L. Woods said the opening of Queen Wilhelmina and Lake Chicot Parks accounted for about 200,000 of the increase.

Thirty-year prison sentences were sought against 12 others, including Peter John Lampton, 24, a British-born naturalized American of Nassau, Bahamas.

The government said it would accept lesser sentences or even acquittal for the other defendants under new legal rules recently promulgated by Castro's cabinet.

Cubans End Trial of Two Americans

By HAROLD K. MILKS

HAVANA (AP) — A military tribunal today ended an 18-hour trial of 2 Americans and 37 Cubans accused of conspiring to overthrow Prime Minister Fidel Castro's revolutionary regime. The court announced it would not reach its verdict before Wednesday.

The prosecution demanded the firing squad for Frank Au, 38, a commercial pilot who was born in Indianapolis, Ind., and makes his home in Miami, Fla., and for Fernando Primo Bertol, 24, Cuban, and former student at Columbia University in New York.

Thirty-year prison sentences were sought against 12 others, including Peter John Lampton, 24, a British-born naturalized American of Nassau, Bahamas.

The government said it would accept lesser sentences or even acquittal for the other defendants under new legal rules recently promulgated by Castro's cabinet.

Youth Recovering From Gun Blast

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A 16-year-old Gurdon youth wounded by a shotgun Sunday at Gurdon is reported in fair condition at a hospital here.

Gene Greer was shot after an argument over a basketball, City Marshal Hubert Welch said. Welch said James Jester, 13, was released to custody of his parents in connection with the shooting. Greer was hit in the stomach and upper part of his body.

The prosecution as well as the defense can appeal a verdict.
